

A component, such as a submersible motor, having a lubrication distribution system. The component comprises an outer housing having a rotatable shaft disposed within the housing. The shaft is supported by one or more bearings, and a lubricant is disposed within the housing. A conduit is provided for conducting a lubricant from the lubricant pump to desired locations, such as the one or more bearings.